A bush abuzz with bees

12 May 1993

Bees swarm a lilac bush in the front yard of Connie Smith's Salt Lake home. Perhaps taking advantage of sunny weather after a week of rain, the bees gathered in the yard for the second day in a row. Lilac bushes at this time of year are a favorite target of the busy insects.

help protect their rights by ing violations they witness. ittle bit of enforcement and education would solve our m," said Jay Bowers of ville.

He said the county should be concerned about the direcshooting than about dis-
. However, Utah County
f David Bateman said state

"If we don't provide some alternatives, we're just going to make everyone a criminal," said Jim Johnson of Orem.

County officials will hold two more public hearings on the proposed ordinance, Monday, May 17, in Lehi and Tuesday, May 18, in Payson. Both hearings will start at 6:30 p.m. Locations will be announced at Wednesday's commission meeting.

They think that somehow somehow they have been Zion National Park as the land — and they want to k rest of us out."

He said members of the which calls itself the Army rael, have told reporters they tend to hang a banner in the or demonstrate with loades he past 11 months studying rovo issues with as little gov-nt intervention as possible.

that time, it came up with rim plan for the area that in-80 recommendations reg land use, housing, trans-ion, environment and public es. The plan is interim until orporated in the city's gen-an in the next few years. The Planning Commission apl the 56-page document esday. The City Council will er it May 25.

task force suggested the city n urban boundary and de-by 27 percent the amount of g suggested in the city's eneral plan. A seven-block or from 1000 North to 1820 should be used for housing more than 3.5 units per acre. rial growth at the airport, the city has plans for an ace park, should be capped acres along 3110 West until roads are built, according to mittee.

plan calls for 44 percent less anufacturing use than does
-year-old general plan. development should be sensitive to existing wetlands.

Because of the low cost of westside land, developers have their eye on it for new subdivisions. The task force recommends a mixture of housing types, prices and density. It encourages developers to build where sewer lines, waterlines and roads are already in place.

Airport expansion, recreational opportunities, light industrial uses and housing have brought more traffic to west Provo. As the area continues to grow, the street network should be developed to foster safe and orderly movement. Task force suggestions include widening Geneva Road from Center Street north to the city limits; widen the Center Street viaduct to five lanes; a five-lane arterial on 3110 West between Center Street and 1800 North and another arterial from the University Avenue interchange on I-15 curving northwest to 1020 South and the airport.

The plan calls for emergency service providers to be able to respond to the west side in five minutes or less, something the task force says they currently can't do.

RECYCLE

it (recycling) mandatory, we reduce the ($3) charge. That per home would dramatical down," Gunn said.

Provo residents are pro-with bins, while Orem resi-pay $10 for their recycling.

Probably won't be mandat

Jones said it is unlikely tory recycling will be adopted Utah because of the cost.
(the government) don't like pose fees on people," he said.

Stewart Cowley, manager
Utah County Solid Waste,
"You have to provide a sys-that it is easy. Most people cycle only when we make it for them."

Gunn said states with mandatory recycling usually have high ping fees at landfills to sup-recycling. But, with increased recycling, the waste stream
